

"What can the Presbyterian Church do?" Says Dr. Rice, she cannot abolish slavery—True, as regards the mere legal act. But she can help that in any way she is enabled, if her members as citizens, at the ballot box, and Christians in the Church, should say, "let us emancipate, it is no longer a burden, penalty, or oppression to black, let us do as we live," she would carry the question before us.

4. Resolved, That it should be the aim of Congress, as guardians of the people's rights, and as far as practicable, to prevent the public domain from falling into the hands of speculators and monopolists, to the prejudices of the settler, and that we request our Senators and Representatives in Congress to resist strenuously the proposed bill to Mr. Whitney, or any other that amelioration in the condition and institutions of France; but power was not to pass into their hands. There was a craftier party behind the scenes, who were wide awake to the chances of the moment. They had their lists prepared, their course marked out. Neither of the parties opposed to them knew of their movements. Nobody dreamed that Lamartine and Guizot, Paganini and Guizot, had conspired to overthrow the Provisional Government; the secret, though generally confined to a number of persons, was well kept. When France rose to the defence of the Revolution of 1848, the conspirators were ready to strike.

AN IMPRESSIVE PICTURE.—The poet Wordsworth is said to be in a state of imbecility, sitting often in ruddy silence, with his gaze fixed on the police insurance." "It deprives its subjects of a great measure of the privileges of a great country." "This system licenses and produces great cruelty." "Brutal stripes and all the varied modes of personal indignities are not the only species of cruelty which slavery licenses. The law does not recognize the family relations of a slave, and extends to him no protection in the enjoyment of domestic endearments. The members of a slave family may be forcibly separated and they shall never more meet, until the fatal moment. And the mother of a slave child

My Love: I consider it proper to point out to you the consequences which will ensue if you fail to attain the naturalization which you request. If you are not an Englishman, you are no longer loved by me; you become Citizen Britannia, and instantly lose all your titles or nobility, your privileges, all the advantages, or any thing they may be, which you enjoy from being as an Englishman, and all the

FOR THE FIRST TIME—The present Pontiff of Rome is truly an extraordinary man. When the five thousand men were about to march to the door of Lombardy, he was asked for his benediction, which he gave as follows:

As Head of the Church, I am at peace with all the nations. As the Father of the Poor, I have a right to defend my country. I am not a soldier, but I am a man of my country. I am not a soldier, but I am a man of my country. I am not a soldier, but I am a man of my country.
